Dear Mr Smith,

Site UK. Proposed development at Fullerton Road, Georgetown.

I have read Site's Environmental Statement, and all information points to the fact that, surprisingly, it will have a negligible effect on the environment. It is my understanding that all this is based on the incinerator operating correctly, and, therefore, it is of paramount importance that it operates within the parameters stated in the Environmental Statement.

Comments from Site's consultants have spoiled my quality of life, leading me to question their ability to control emissions.

If this development was to go ahead, I believe that one of the most important aspects of the site is missing, a reliable information as to the effect which stacks of scrubbers, monitoring equipment and the incinerator's emissions will have.

I am concerned that if a site being developed in a residential area is to be given a licence to operate, this is a step which is not being taken, and that the use of this site as a way to
